Sam Garrigues, who is in the hospital yet, is reported as getting along as well as could be hoped for considering the serious nature of his case, and it is the expectation now that he will be able to return home this week, though it will necessarily be a long time at best before he regains his health and strength. He returned home yesterday morning.—Utica Enterprise.

Last Wednesday evening eighteen picnickers gathered at the Gleason Bros' ranch, northwest of town where one of the jolliest times of the season was had. Two auto loads from town went out to join the merry makers. An excellent supper was enjoyed by all. The Gleason ranch hospitality is known far and wide and the invaders all declared their intentions of returning soon.

W. T. Littlechild, one of the largest cattle men in western Kansas, shipped in 90 head of steers last Sunday from Kansas City, and drove them out to his big ranch on the Saline where he will fatten them this winter and return them to Kansas City next spring. Uncle Billy has been in Kansas long enough to know that we have a dry spell about every ten years and he puts up enough feed or always has on hand enough to do him two years. Good idea this.

Ever notice that it business gets a little quiet, the first thing the merchant does is to cut out advertising—the very thing which should not be done. The newspaper man has no method for cutting down his expense. No matter how dull his business may be, every week the paper must come out and the bills must be paid—and the duller business is, the more his income is cut into and the bigger his typesetting bills grow. We have often wondered if it were possible for any condition to arise in which the editor is not expected to "be the goat."—Mankato Advocate.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Dann and son Ben and youngest daughter of Beltsville, Md., arrived in the city Wednesday evening and are visiting old-time friends. Mr. Dann was head clerk in the land office in the boom days of Wa-Keeney when Captain Hanna was register of the land office. In those days he was the best posted man in all the west on land office business. His son Ben was just four months old when he left Wa-Keeney for the east—so it was quite a treat to him to see the town where he was born. Their many friends were glad to meet them once more. Mr. D. says he can see great changes in the old town in the past eighteen years.

On Wednesday afternoon a quarrel which ended in a stabbing affair took place out near Frank Walker's old place north of town. It seems that there had been trouble brewing for some time over the moving of the school house in that neighborhood and because notices of an election that was to be held on that day were not thought to be lawfully executed quite a bitter quarrel followed. J. W. Fronce and Wm. Trowbridge were the first to make trouble and Mr. Nowlin a son-in-law of Fronce tried to assist him when Trowbridge drew a knife and stabbed him in the side. Mr. Nowlin is suffering from quite a painful wound. It is said that legal proceedings will be instituted against Trowbridge.

When a newspaper man owes for stock, type, insurance, etc., the creditors send a collector around, or their statements, followed soon after by a sight draft if not paid shortly. And he has to dig up at the rate of ten, fifty or a hundred dollars at a whack. But when a thousand or more people owe a newspaper man he can only make his feeble little appeal to them to pay their dollar or two apiece, and if they don't pay he can, but he cannot send a personal collector around, or a sight draft, because it would be impracticable. His creditors are prompt with statements but his debtors are not always prompt with remittances, even though the debts are small and the money would not be missed greatly. Why is this?—Jacksonian.

The County Commissioners were in session four days last week and made a little re-adjustment in county salaries in the interest of justice and equality. The latest law makes clerk hire for the county clerk and county treasurer an optional matter with the county commissioners, so they decided to "cut her out." Later in the session they reconsidered the matter as applied to the county treasurer and allowed him the clerk hire. The net result is that the county clerk gets the same as last year and the treasurer gets an increase. The clerk of the district court now gets $900 per year instead of $500, and the commissioners also allowed him $800 back pay. However, the probate judge is still skinned down to the same little old dollar and thirty-seven cents per day, so it is not so very hard on the county after all. Great is justice and equity!

Dear Amy:—

When people must spend so much of their time at home, I don't see why more of them do not furnish their homes more beautifully. I feel sorry for poor Laura, whose husband just won't give her money to buy some new things her home is just crying for. He is slowly breaking her heart. I sometimes think I'll tell her husband not to be so stingy.

Baby John has the "hookin" cough, so I dare not come to see you now.

Your old chum,

Lou.

P.S.—I'm always satisfied with the furniture and rugs I buy from
